If someone could help me find what I need for my phone and watch on my pc aswell, that would be great! A: I have the exact same problem, I have a pirate tv box which streams anime from the internet and I was going to record it to my phone but it doesn't have an option to do that. (Or at least I don't think it does) But in any case, for those of you with similar problems, this is what I do, if you're watching on the computer you can do this for any source in general, not just Crunchyroll, but this does require a desktop, desktop can be anything, be it a netbook, laptop, mac, you name it. Download the latest JRE from here and double click it, and it will go to you Downloads folder. Double click it there. Right click and select extract here. You should see a folder in your downloads folder called JRE. Open up your terminal and type this command. `sudo cp jre-8u77-linux-x64.bin /usr/java/jre1.8.0_77/` It will take a few seconds, and then you can close the terminal. Double click JRE and it should have a

JRE 8u77 or something. Next I am going to assume you are using linux, here is what you can do for the phone. Open up your desktop. Drag the folder in your Downloads folder into your computer. (When you drag it you will notice that the file changes to a little arrow. Click the arrow with the mouse, or you can press ctrl + Shift + del if you are using windows to close the folder. After it is finished downloading you will have this folder which will be called AppStorage. Drag and drop your JRE 8u77 into that folder. Open up your phone, go to applications and find JRE. Click the little orange play symbol and then when the option pops up click install. It will work for now, next time you open the JRE (I am assuming you will want to run it) you can simply click the play symbol and it will open. ![(envhper00395-0136.tif "scanned-page"){.145} ![(envhper00395- 82157476af
